Decision Up to Pershing.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 18 .-Whether the American troops that arived last night at Casas Grandes should enter the town or not is for Gen. Pershing to decide, Gen. Funston aniounced today. Unless otherwise instructed by the War Department, Gen. Funston is disposed not to interfere with the details of Gen. Pershing's operations.

Gen. Gavira's reported refusal to permit the American troops to enter Casas Grandes revived some doubt at Fort Sam Houston today of the full co-operation of the de facto government's forces.

co-operation of the de facto govern-ment's forces.

The announcement of Gen. Gavira. The announcement of Gen. Gavira, commandant at Juarez, that American troops had arrived almost at the outskirts of Casas Grandes and planned to enter the town during the night was the first news received by Maj. Gen. Funston that the punitive forces had reached that far south. The speed with which the advance force was being pushed indicated an average march of about thirty miles a day.

That Gen. Pershing is personally with the troops that were reported to have arrived at Casas Grandes was doubted. It was considered more likely that the force halted there is a cavalry detachment sent forward by Gen. Pershing under Col. Slocum or possibly Col. Dodd.

Pershing soon will be in position to redivide his forces, and from near the heart of the region where Villa has been operating begin a systematic with recard to the issuance of new with recard to the interest to the cabinet to been operating begin a systematic search for the Mexican bandit. Official reports to Gen. Funston gave assurances that there had been no clash between Americans and Mexicana. It was estimated that Col. Dodd, who crossed the international boundary line at 1 o'clock Thursday morning, forty-seven miles from Hachita, N. M., last night was close by, if not actually in touch with the heavier and slower column led in Wednesday by Gen. Pershing.

at Gusman.

Many persons taken to be bandits are to be seen, usually singly, in the lonesome foothills and mountain passes to the west of the road which runs past the northern environs of Gusman.

The bandits, according to the people of this section, usually are seen leading their herses to the limited watering places located in the ravines of the foothills.

There scarcely is a sound along this foothills.

There scarcely is a sound along this lenely road, north of Gusman, except the cries of a few crows which fly about this region looking for carcasses. East of this all but foraken road lies the large lake named Gusman. Today numerous hunters could be heard on the south extremity of the lake trying to add duck to the menu of the apparently well fed and contented constitutionalist garrison. The constitutionalist soldiers seen here seemed in excellent spirits and under good discipline. Many of them today were busy reconstructing a bridge between here and Cassas Grandes. It was said the bridge was burned by sparks from a lecomotive.

is in the minimum strength fixed for the National Guard under the proposed federalization provisions. The Senate bill provides for 280,000, while the House bill calls for 425,000 in five years.

The report on the Senate bill lays stress on its proposal for a third force, to take in men who for any reason would not be found in the ranks of the regulars or the National Guard. This is described as a purely federal volunteer force, and in effect it is comparable to a continental army. A total strength of 261,000 in this force is provided for.

The House bill aims at the same force through authorization of the training camp movement which has been in progress for two years.

The full strength of the defensive armies provided under the Senate bill would be 777,000 men in war time, exclusive of reserves.
